Harry Hill's TV Burp filming outside The Elgin on Ladbroke Grove; Kate Moss at Lucky 7 on Westbourne Grove; Paloma Faith putting her best (10-inch-heel shod) foot forward with Alan Carr in Notting Hill.

THE W11 WONDERS

A new way of prolonging your life is revealed: live in Kensington. The Office of National Statistics recently announced that a baby born in Kensington enjoys London's highest life expectancy of 87.3 years, 10 years after someone born in Harlesden, just a 13-minute drive away. Experts believe, however, this is more to do with affluence increasing the likelihood of good health than the miracle qualities of any magical Kensington postcode.

SIENNA MILLER

It was reported at Christmas that Jude Law was back with former girlfriend Sienna Miller; apparently, she has now moved in with her on-off beau – just around the corner from her Maida Vale home to his two-bed bachelor pad. "Sienna has already moved most of her stuff into Jude's place, which is very close by," a friend was reported as saying. "She spends every waking moment with him."

LO AND BEHOLD

Hollywood starlet Lindsay Lohan was recently seen leaving the Electric Cinema mid-way through a night of partying – just hours before a court in Beverly Hills conducted a drink-driving progress hearing concerning Lohan (the star was sentenced to three years' probation for her second drink-driving offence in August 2007). Judge Marsha Revel said Lohan is "in full compliance, and that "everything looks good".

NEGOZIO CLASSICA

In an age when New World wines are almost more prevalent than their older, European cousins, it's nice to see a store devoted to classic Italian viticulture. Negozio Classica boasts a wide range of wines from famous regions like Tuscany and Piedmont, plus some fiery grappas (and, OK, some wines from Slovenia and elsewhere). Best of all, you can buy wine by the glass, and mop it up with a delicious selection of antipasti. 283 Westbourne Grove, W11 2QA
